539 MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE / ARCHITECTURAL DESCRIPTION:

This much altered 1 1/2 story gable-roof building, built during the latter half of the 19th century, has been dramatically altered. Originally constructed in a vernacular form of the Italianate style, it has lost significant architectural integrity. Resting on a granite foundation, the three bay house is situated with its gable end to the street (south). A projecting pedimented portico with a lean-to roof extends west. Sheathed in new clapboards, the house retains little of its historic appearance. Windows have all been replaced with contemporary sash, including the installation of a picture window in the south facade.

539 MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE / HISTORICAL DESCRIPTION:

The residence at 539 Massachusetts Avenue was constructed in the early 1870s according to historic maps (Walling/Beers). The radically altered gable-front building was very likely built as a storage facility by the A.O.W. Mead Company, a produce marketing business with several buildings in this vicinity (see 5-7 Spruce). Tax records (1870s) indicate that A.O.W. Meads whed a barn in this area. Although no owner is listed on the 1875 map, the building appears to be located on the Meads' property. By 1889, the structure is listed under O. Mead, presumably, Oliver W. Mead, one of the three brothers who ran the Mead's enterprise (see 262 Central). By 1916, the building was used as a two-family dwelling (Sanborn).

Begun in the 1840s, the Meads' produce marketing business was based in West Acton, where produce from surrounding farms was stored, and in Boston where goods were sold. The Meads were in business in Boston until the 1940s (see 5-9 Spruce Street).

On this section of Massachusetts Avenue, east of the village center, stood Mr. Robinson's store (see #536 Mass Ave), a school and factory (both demolished), and several single family houses built primarily between 1845 and 1885. This development was associated with the 1845 arrival of the railroad and subsequent commercial and industrial growth. During the latter half of the 19th century, West Acton's industries included a cigar factory and a grist mill, cider mills, produce marketing, tub and pail manufacturing, overall manufacturing, and several other enterprises. Before the railroad, the "village" at the intersection of Massachusetts Avenue (Harvard Turnpike, 1799), Arlington Street (1735), and Central Street (1766) was a sparsely settled outpost known as the "west part of town."
